

Arts fest makes for gay day in Old Fourth Ward

By Mike Fleming | Jun 30, 2014 | 11:20 AM

The gay masterminds behind a yearlong series of park festivals did what they do best again over the weekend. Their latest event got to know Old Fourth Ward Park with plenty of the LGBT-ATL's own in tow.

Like their other festivals dotting the metro Atlanta map and calendar, original arts and crafts, food, music and (mostly) sunshine brought out the people in droves to buy some art and enjoy the intown scenery.

Old Fourth Ward Arts Festival is just the latest in a well-established annual schedule of arts fests by Atlanta Foundation for Public Spaces. The gay couple behind it oversees a dozen park festivals in Atlanta from spring through summer and well into fall each year. Up next is the Piedmont Park Arts Festival in August.